INTRODUCTION :

UGO LI | The Everyday Seen

The Everyday Seen is an invitation to pause. A quiet celebration of looking &mdash; of truly noticing &mdash; and of the quiet richness that lives within the ordinary. This exhibition doesn't seek to transform everyday subjects, but to reveal them, with clarity, restraint, and care.

Here, the subjects are familiar: flowers at the edge of fading, domestic objects, figures glimpsed in passing. They are not dramatized or altered. Their beauty lies in their presence, in the way light touches them, in the quiet moment they occupy.

These paintings do not demand attention; they invite it. They resist spectacle and instead offer a slower kind of engagement &mdash; one that asks: What do we miss, every day? What escapes us in the rush of habit? This is not a practice of invention, but of perception. A form of tenderness for what already exists &mdash; for what is often overlooked, yet quietly luminous.

To look at these works is to be reminded that meaning need not be imposed; it can be found. In a teacup, in the line of a shoulder, in a flower about to wilt. In things we have seen a hundred times, but perhaps never truly noticed.

What happens when we really see the everyday?

This exhibition poses that question &mdash; not with urgency, but with quiet conviction.
